Celebrating The Life Of Georgia Mae Veal:

Georgia Mae Veal was born in Demopolis, Alabama on December 17, 1929 to Fannie Mae Jackson and George Sledge. Both of Georgia's parents died while she was a young child and she was raised by her great- aunt Lula Mae Nixon. Georgia moved to Detroit, Michigan as a teenager and graduated from Miller High School.

Georgia married twice on June 10, 1948 to Robert Jackson; and on February 22, 1975 to Carl Veal, both preceded her in death.

Georgia was a hardworking woman and was employed at Kresge Department Store for over twenty years. She was later employed as a cook at Lutheran Child and Family Services(Lang House). After her retirement from Lang House, Georgia became involved in the Foster Grandparent Program.

Georgia confessed her faith in Christ at an early age. She was a member of Sweet Home Baptist Church for over twenty years, and after became a member of New Birth Baptist Church where she was an active member of the Mother's Board until her health declined. Georgia loved eating, cooking, eating, playing bingo, eating, entertaining family and friends and eating. Georgia could cook anything, however, at family gatherings she was known for her spaghetti salad and punchbowl cake. Although Georgia's health issues prevented her from being as active as she had in the past, Georgia maintained a hearty appetite and continued to indulge in her love of food.

She liked to keep busy. She enjoyed crafting and making floral arrangements and did not hesitate to share the results of her projects with family and friends. Georgia was a wonderful woman. Her love of life and family was evident in how she lived her life. She had a strong sense of right and wrong and did not hesitate to let you know when she considered your actions wrong. Georgia had a huge heart. She provided love and support to whoever needed it, whenever needed.
