“ It took me a while to come on here and write, but here I go. I unfortunately didn't get nearly enough time with Hannah as I befriended her not too long before her passing. But from the moments ive had with her at school i can tell you that she was the most beautiful soul. She always did exactly what she wanted and didnt care what anyone said about her. She would always be so cheerful in the hallways saying hi too all of her friends including me. She loved her brothers beyond measures. She was insanely smart, and was absolutely devoted to her studies. Dhe always talked kindly of me and I received a text about how she told someone I'm a good friend :). Right before she passed she gave a speech at school kind of like a Ted talk. She was talking about mental health and how you can get through it by working hard. I don't usually pay attention to these kinds of speeches but hers was exceptional. She had a way with her words and I'll remember them forever. I hope she's having the best time with her siblings in eternal paradise because I know for a fact all 3 of them got into heaven immediately.

“ Hannah was my good friend. We hung out at school while I was waiting for my bus. I really enjoyed hanging out with her. She was fun to talk to and made waiting for the bus amazing. She was really kind and really cheerful. She was very funny. She played the cello. She sometimes took me to walk around the high school. It was fun walking around the high school with Hannah.

“ Hannah was one of my closest friends. We would talk for hours about many things such as God, jokes and many deep conversations. I always loved how self critical she was. She held herself to an impossible standard to a point where I would tell her that she was good. She was friends with me and my siblings. She was very vocal about her relationship with Jesus and always talked about how she wanted to be an evangelist. Hannah played instruments, did chemistry and more importantly one of my closest friends. She knew when to be serious, funny, and up lifting. Many friends of mine came and gone but Hannah stayed. I never had any issues with Hannah. I remember her making such sacrificing such as sacrificing coming to my church and homecoming to take care of and mentor her younger siblings. She was friends with my younger siblings but drew me near with how loving and peaceful she was. She was a younger sister to me. The many conversations when she would ask more for advice and how to handle certain things always put a smile on my face. My condolences to the family. You guys did such an amazing job raising her and making sure she was the best version of herself. Whether that be her personality, her comedy or and her beautiful dresses she would wear everyday everywhere. Rest in Jesus hands Hannah, Jeremiah and Jacob. 🙏

Typos. I meant to say and she was one of my closest friends. You can ignore the most importantly part. (Everything she did was important and phenomenal.) I apologize. Hannah never was one to be aggressive, mean or did anything that was hurtful. This is what I meant when I said I never had any problems with her. I don't like how I worded it. Hannah was special to me and always had a very close space in my heart. Hannah also was always trying to improve in herself. She always strove to be the best version of herself. Many times criticizing herself for little things. She was so passionate about being almost perfect. But I just wanted her to know she was amazing just the way she was. (Also what I meant was I said she was good) Many of my friends came and come but Hannah stuck to me like a younger sister and I will forever love her for that. Praying for the Oliora family! We love you Oliora family and will keep you uplifted in our prayers 🙏 Thank you for blessing us with some of the most amazing, beautiful, inspiring kids the world has ever seen. Thank you Oliora children for making the world a much better place. Love- J Tillman* “ Hannah was one of the sweetest and smartest people I knew. Every day when I'd see her at school she'd greet me with a smile and ask me how my day was going. She could make friends with anyone around her with her outgoing personality, and she always found something to talk about even if she didn't know you very well. I'll forever miss our random and hilarious conversations that always brightened my mood. May she rest in peace, and never be forgotten from our hearts.

“ Hannah was my best friend and we did everything together. Ill never forget all the good times we had from being on hour long calls, playing Roblox, or even just hanging out in person. Weather it was a party, hang out, or just at school hannah brought positivity into my life and many others. Hannah was a very positive person who wanted everyone to do great things in life. May she rest in peace and may her positive live on in my heart and many others. ”
