“ My heart is broken, saddened as I mourn the passing of a true icon of Detroit and Michigan's Black American entrepreneurial history. Helen Wright a gorgeous woman who could light up a room with that beautiful smile whenever she entered. Strong willed and determined, self confident, intelligent and extremely industrious. She was kind, caring, sharing and above all loving and tender hearted. As one of the few female printers operating in a man's world of business, she never backed away from a challenge always giving and demanding excellence in her product and services. She drove that ethic into her son Albert and daughter Kenyatta which they have carried on in their lives to this day. I loved Helen Wright, so much more than a friend. And her memory will remain locked in my heart and soul forever. You've won another battle "Helen Girl !"
A celebrated legacy of the Detroit we once knew, gone home never to be forgotten.
