“ *My cousin, Henry, was a transplant from the South, Alabama, in fact, who kept his love for the land. He acquired skills and that taught him how to repair and modify things and put them back into service. He kept a list of projects and endeavors that he like to work on often with his blow torch. He liked a lot of clutter around him which is a sure enough male Pickens trait. He never tired of talking about his children, Monique, the 'grands', and even great grands whom he nurtured and encouraged. He liked to do kind things, help people, spread joy. My family enjoyed many a Good Ole Boys Picnic with him on Belle Isle where he cooked all day, sipping as the day progressed. Before my dad, his beloved Uncle Alex, made his transition, Hank ministered to him with devoted care, grooming, shaving, caring for him right beside us. When he called yearly to wish me a Happy Birthday and, later, a Merry Christmas, I was always so impressed at his thoughtfulness. That was who he was and that was what he did, spread kindness and make people smile. To Fran, Monique, and the rest of the family and friends, we share your loss. He will be missed.

Thank you for painting such a beautiful picture of our second cousin. Seth and I appreciated the time on the pool table, watching the menfolk play. I seem to recall Cousin Henry had a few skills with the cue stick.

He rebuilt hard to find parts of the flower boxes at the house. Tools were repaired or made better by his knowhow.

Reading your post made me smile at a difficult moment.

Bless you for blessing us in this way.
