“ Your Daisy and two grandchildren would like to finally say we love you and may you now rest peacefully. It saddens me that I didn't get to see you to say these things while you were here but now you can hear my cry, I remember everything we use to do together from riding our bikes to just cruising to jazz music. I came to live with you when I was just a little girl you cooked me breakfast everyday, you even tried to do my hair for church. Grandad I'll always love you and our bond was never broken I know your up there cooking for the angles so I'll let you get to it watch over us.

“ I could not have asked for a nicer next door neighbor than Mr Coleman.

I will always cherish the fun times we had together, like watching the Detroit Pistons win the NBA championship on TV in his house or riding together in his Mustang convertible.

Although you were physically limited during your last years of life on this earth, I could tell that you enjoyed life nevertheless in spite of your handicap, thanks mostly to the love that you and Consuelo had for each other.

Mr Coleman, please enjoy your time in heaven with my late wife Katharina, until Consuelo and I eventually join you there someday.
