“ My little cousin, James "Snickle" Major, Jr. was the youngest of the boys living with our maternal grandmother and grandfather, Evelyn and Albert Miller. Three of us, Charles "Chuck", Snickle, and I slept in the same bed until I was about 10 years old. To say the least, we had our times of difficulty. We fought so much that people thought our bedroom was Madison Square Garden. One night we were making such a ruckus that Grandma came in the room and turned off the light. We knew she was in the room, but couldn't see her moving. Snickle thought he could escape through the window but got caught. Grandma sailed in on him, giving him "the grandma treatment" that he would never forget. As we matured, we developed a brotherly bond that grew deeper. I will miss my little cousin/brother, but I know he is at peace and relieved of his suffering.
