Jean Bland was the third of five children that blessed the union of Robert and Eleanor Scott. Born on July 7, 1938 in Detroit, Michigan. She was educated in the Detroit Public Schools system and graduated from Northwestern High School in 1958.

During her childhood and teenage years, she learned and enjoyed sewing and baking and was in the girl scouts, she even sang in the choir. She had beautiful penmanship and loved to write.

Jean was first married at a young age to Louis Barry. Out of that union she was blessed with two children, Linda and Leroy (her son preceded her in death). She was later united with Charley Bland Jr., affectionately known as Jack. From that union came two beautiful daughters, Sandra and Roxanne as well as seven stepdaughters and three stepsons. During this time in her life, she was an active mother who was fully engaged in school functions and community activities. She was very outgoing and loved being in the midst of adventure. She had a tremendous zest for life. She enjoyed traveling. One of her highlights of 2013 was her travel to Washington, DC for the first Scott Family Reunion. She loved spending time with her cousins from DC and reminisced of them fondly.

In her later years, she made many friends in her senior community apartment. She was known by all her neighbors and often welcomed visitors. She was very generous, kindhearted and caring. Despite her declining health, Jean still maintained her tenacity, spunk and her own outlook on life. Even during her final days she smiled often, joked around and laughed with family, visitors and caregivers.
