“ My deepest condolences go out to Josh’s family. I met Josh a few years ago when my partner and I visited him from Canada. Josh was immediately welcoming, funny, and just overall kind. There are no words for the loss of Josh. Josh I will miss our conversations and how easy those happened when I first entered your life. I hope you rest in the sweetest peace and you will never be forgotten❤️

“ I wanted to share a memory of Josh, but settling on just one memory is impossible. I’ve known Josh for over 10 years, and during that time I feel like the two of us have built a mountain of history I couldn’t even begin to uncover in such a short post. He was like a brother to me, and his passing will stay with me for the rest of my life. I feel privileged to have got to know him on such a level, as are the legions of people whose lives he has touched. Intelligent, honest, and reliable. Josh was always somebody I could count on to give me advice and support when things became difficult, even if I didn’t know I needed it at the time.

When I think of his passing, I’m reminded of a quote regarding his favourite superhero, Superman:

“Though we gather here today bound together in sorrow and loss, we share a precious gift. We are all of us privileged to live a life that has been touched by Superman. The Man of Steel possessed many extraordinary gifts, and he shared them with us freely. None of these gifts were more remarkable than his ability to discern what needed to be done, and his unfailing courage in doing it, whatever the personal cost. Let us all strive to accept his gift and pass it along, as an ongoing tribute to Kal-El of Krypton, the immigrant from the stars who taught us all how to be heroes.”

I love you, and I’ll see you again someday, my brother. I know you’re watching over everyone from up there.
