“ You were my other mother. You taught me its okay to cry and its okay to not like a person and its okay to be different. You gave us fashion and crazy styles. You were there when no one else was; you moded me into the person i am ; An even when me and Shrita were on the outs you called me to see how i was doing. You did my hair and handle my hand when i couldnt go on. You kept me a Shrita together from our late night fights to our early morning jail calls. You will be missed so much! God always takes the good ones to join his army of angels. Till we meet again mama k
