

Mrs. Lynette Anderson

August 13, 1944 - January 18, 2017

Celebrating The Life Of Lynette Anderson:

Lynette Dixon was born to the union of Berdine and William S. Dixon in Oakland, California during World War II. After returning to Detroit, they also had a son, William Jr. "Billy."

Lynette attended Cass Technical High School (with Diana Ross). She excelled in violin, swim team and modern dance. She also later attended Chicago State University. The rest of her studies were finished at Wayne State University, where she met and married Benjamin Weaver III. From that union two children were born, LeAndra Weaver Scott and Benjamin Weaver IV. After graduation, she then re-met her current husband, James C. Anderson of 23 years, who also has a son, James Anderson III "Andy."

Lynette Anderson had an English major and taught school at Pershing then the rest of her teaching career at Kettering High School.

Lynette took care of her family, attended her C.H.U.M.S. club meeting and she especially loved to travel all over the country. There wasn't a weekend that went by that you could call her and James and their response was "We Not Here!!" Well, where are you? "We Don't Know!" Non-destinations were their favorite.
