“ *I have been following you on yuubote and now this site for about 3 weeks. On June9, 2010, I made the HUGE decision to cut off my hair and go natural. This was after weeks of deliberating and having so many people in my life sound in on the decision. Most of the feedback was positive some was more negative. Regardless, I had no idea how I would feel after I did it. I have to say with 100% honesty, that I am VERY happy that I made the decision. I will say in addition however, that cutting off my relaxed hair after only growing it out for a little over a month was the most EMOTIONAL thing that I have ever done. Your blog encouraged me to see my TRUE NATURAL beauty and to not be wrapped up in stereotypical images nor self inflicted images of beauty. When I watched your big chop, I almost cried. I knew that it was my time and turn. I have only been natural for a week now, and I overall feel great. There are FOR SURE moments when I look in the mirror and don't feel as beautiful as before. Times when I feel like a boy and even wish that I just had more length. But I am SO encouraged by your journey and learning that I have got to start feeling comfortable in my own skin with or w/o relaxed hair. I am finally seeing my eyes, my cheek bones, the sparkle that is in my appearance. I'm finally learning that I have to walk with my head up. To be a proud black woman with proud black coils. Thank you for documenting your journey. You have no idea how much you have been a blessing to me and I truly thank God for your diligence. I pray that this never becomes a burden, but that instead out of your passion that you would feel encouraged to bless others with the information and knowledge that you share. “ Cedric was such a wonderful and friendly person to know. He was both funny and wise. I love being around people who can make me laugh and make me think and Cedric was such a person. We didn't always take the same position on issues and so we had lots of friendly debates. But I always admired him for his strength of character, his positive outlook on life and his faith and courage in the midst of adversity. I and my household appreciate every act of kindness and consideration that he showed us throughout the years.

To Peaches, his children and the rest of his family, "The Lord bless you and keep you; the Lord make His face shine upon you, and be gracious unto you; the Lord lift up His countenance upon you, and give you peace."##imported-begin##Diane Parker##imported-end##
