“ In a time like this, condolences seem so inadequate - because they are. Words and even sincere acts are dwarfed by the grief that has to be endured by this young man's loved ones. Contrary to what many well-meaning people may say: you never get over losing one so dear; you just learn how to live in spite of it. I pray all the lovingkindness God has to give on the family and loved ones of Gene, Jr. There is nothing else I could begin to do except ask God to hold your hearts when they are hurting the worst. But through it all, all you will need is God.

To Black: I know you are somewhere better, probably laughing at us because we just don't know the peace you are finally able to experience. Or maybe you are crying, for us, because we have such a journey ahead of us here on earth before we get to where you are. Either way, you will be missed forever and beyond. It was too soon for you to go and so much more for you to do, so many more lives for you to touch and I hate to say goodbye. So I will say see you later. By the Grace of God, we will all get there eventually. Rest in peace, lil negro##imported-begin##Taniesha Ivy##imported-end##

“ It is with sadness that I express condolence for such a young man in my eyes. Nothing words can say, nothing a friend could do, could make up for the passing of one so dear to you. I pray that you receive some measure of comfort and relief to know that sympathetic thoughts are with you in your grief. May the comfort of Jehovah and his son Jesus, bring peace to your hearts now and through the days ahead. May your tears of sadness turn to smiles as you remember the times shared with Mr. Wright. 2 Corinthians 1:3, 4; Revelations 21:3-5 Isaiah 26:19, Proverbs 3:5-7.##imported-begin##Liz Malone##imported-end##
