“ To My Grandpa and my Family,

Although I was not as close to Grandpa Mac as I wish I was, he was special to me. I feel saddened by his death but I know when I get to heaven we will have eternity to get to become closer to one another. Whenever someone passes away I think about the would of's, could of's, should of's, but I am learning a lesson in the light of tragedy. I am learning to make the most of each day of life. Along with that I realize that family is one of the most important things a person can have. So I am now inspired to stay in touch with my family more frequently, not just when times are hard or when something major happens. Therefore, I am going to challenge my uncles, my aunts and especially my cousins to keep in consistent contact with the entire family (even the non local family). Grandpa Mac knew a lot about families, because his family is so big, so the lesson I am learning about the importance of family in the wake of his passing is very appropriate.

I was able to speak with grandpa the Sunday before he passed and I let him know I loved him and that I was praying for his health. At the time I didn't know it would be the last time I would speak to him, but I am glad I was able say my final goodbye. So thank you Grandpa for opening my eyes and my heart, because with your death I have realized I need to embrace my family because they are a big part of me. I love you Grandpa and I love you family.
