“ Mother, I will miss you, our long conversations...THANK YOU for being the perfect mother for me!

I remember how we use to pray together, laugh together and talk about old times together.

Thank you for teaching me life lessons and demonstrating how a parent should love unconditionally; your faith never faded even in the mist of the raging storms. What an incredible women.

Everyone spoke so highly of you, it made me even more proud to be your son. I find comfort in knowing that everything you ask me to do, I did it and also I find comfort in knowing that I was with you during your transition. Just you and I in the room together, what a since of peace and joy. I may not ever experince that feeling again. However, I will always remember hearing your voice say "Don't worry about me, I'll be alright" as I began to smile and wipe away the tears as I held your arm on top of my arm, gently rubbing your hands and the side of your face mother; you took your final breath. No more pain, no suffering, no more heart ache, no more worries. Some more Joy, some more peace. So mother; you take your rest now. I'm not saying good bye, just so long for now...I will to see you again one day.

I Thank God for you and your life with me and our family. Give everyone a kiss you had a chance to reunite with. Were sad to see you go, but their glad to have you there.....##imported-begin##Dwayne Hartman##imported-end##

“ Mary was a dear friend of mine. She was always so positive and her faith in Christ showed through in all her trials and tribulations. I look forward to meeting up with her in the air when Christ comes to take us home. Love, Susan, Sonya and Sirena###imported-begin##Susan C. Camilli###imported-end##
