Celebrating The Life Of Nathan Williams:

Nathan Williams came into this world November 6, 1954 in Detroit, Michigan, becoming the third son born to the union of Charlie and Gladys Williams. Nathan better known as (Nate) graduated from Chadsey High School in Detroit, Michigan, January of 1972. He would later attend various trade schools which made him a skillful handyman. Nathan retired from the Detroit Water Department after many years of dedicated service.

One of his hobbies was cooking and when it came to his culinary skills Nathan was known for his wild game, barbecue ribs and sauce. To this day the ingredients and recipes for his barbecue sauce remain a mystery.

He had a passion for the old Motown hits, and when the weekends came around Nathan could be heard saying “Bow Bow” while singing the song “Living for the Weekend” by the renowned O'Jays vocal group.

Nathan attended Russell Street Baptist Church and later attended First New Life Church where his oldest brother Bishop Charles E. Williams is Senior Pastor and Founder.

Nathan was a husband, father, grandfather and uncle and he will be missed. He has left so many memories that will be cherished by his brothers Charles and Bruce and the many friends that he met from the shop, his job and all around the city of Detroit and Grand Blanc.

Nathan's beloved father preceded him in death in January of 2008, the second oldest brother (Noah) passed away in December of 2013, and sons Nathan and Darnell in 2012.

Nathan departed this life Thursday, February 4, 2016.
