Celebrating The Life Of Reginald Eugene Jackson, Sr.

Reginald Eugene Jackson, Sr. was born June 25, 1950 in Detroit, Michigan to the union of Helen and Linwood Jackson, who preceded him in death.

Reginald was known as Reggie the crazy, fun, loving, silly guy who made everyone laugh.

Reggie loved to work with his hands, growing up he loved to build model cars and planes. He attended Detroit Public Schools and graduated early from Central High School in 1968. He attended Eastern Michigan University before joining the United States Army.

On December 23, 1999, Reginald Jackson married the love of his life, Phyllis Friar of Detroit, Michigan, who also preceded him in death. It was a rare occasion to see one without the other. Together they are certainly making heaven more entertaining. Those close to them knew them as the life of the party, always laughing, singing, and cracking jokes.

Reggie retired from Ford Motor Company in 2007 after 13 years of service.

On February 16, 2015, God called his angel home.
