“ Ms. Gray, without you and your love, kindness, and knowledge, I would not be where I am today. You were an important part of me becoming a nurse and shaping me into who I am today. I will always be grateful for your sharing your passion with all of us. I pray you are resting in peace and looking over those you loved. Your life was cut short, but as Ella Wilcox once said, “Death is a delightful journey that I will take when my tasks are done.” It seems that God needed you more. As a fellow nurse, you are now relieved of your nursing duties, we will take it from here.

“ Thank you, Ms. Gray, for sharing your knowledge and kindness with me and helping me become the nurse I am. In the words of Florence Nightingale, “A human being does not cease to exist at death. It is change, not destruction, which takes place.” We are not bodies with souls, we are souls with bodies and our souls are eternal. Sending prayers of love and comfort for the Gray Family
