

Mr. Wayne Jacob-Mario Hollman

April 17, 1990 - January 31, 2015

Celebrating The Purpose Driven Life Of Wayne Jacob Mario Hollman:

Dear Wayne (Mario to many)

How are you? We know busy as always! Wanted to know if we can borrow a minute of your time and take a walk down memory lane. Do you remember April 17, 1990? Of course not, but that was the day that God blessed us with a healthy baby boy named Wayne Jacob Mario Hollman. You were the baby boy of three siblings. Your two older sisters, Aramis and Dottiana awaited your arrival but not as much as your parents Wayne Sr. and Denise.

Who would have known how much you would accomplish? Baptized and saved at the early age of nine. You went on and became an honor roll student at Renaissance High School. During this time, you were a part of Dacep, Nabas, the Honor Society and National Association of Black Auto Suppliers just to name a few.

Upon your high school graduation in 2007, you turned down Harvard, Yale, Purdue and the University of Michigan to attend Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). You were set to become an engineer and "Change the world" from your early beginnings. You accomplished this goal, and received a bachelor of Science in Engineering specializing in Mechanical Engineering at MIT in 2011. During your time at MIT, you were a: Project Engineer Intern at BPWind in 2009, R.F.I.D. Designer at the National University of Singapore in 2010, Group member of Meetup Groups in 2011, Marketing Intern with the Extern Company in 2011 and a MIT Ambassador Coordinator. We can spend hours talking about all your other accomplishments, because we know you loved to devote yourself to many great causes. But most of all, during this time, you met your lovely wife, Aissata.

After your journey through MIT, you moved forward to GE Renewable Development Program 2010-2013, Senior Project coordinator with the Lucid Design Group 2013-2015 and recently awarded the position in Business Operations at LinkedIn in 2015. You were set to attend Kellogg School of Management in Chicago, September 2015.

You have done so many great things through your charity work, mentor programs, associations and helping so many family and friends along the way. So, what's next Wayne? God will be using you in His kingdom.
