“ I first started getting close with Bill when we were both cut back from trades working on the 6 speed assembly line, then positions opened up for machinists in Prismatic and that's where our friendship really took off. Bill was the only person I know who could make me feel good about myself after every conversation. I had been a trades machinist on the outside and had done cnc programming so I picked up on the machines pretty quick and stopped relying on the team leaders Bill started to notice and I'd help him out once in a while so he teasingly nicknamed me teamleaeer Tina (although I was not one at the time). When we both got back to our trades and at times different shifts, if I heard Bill was in the building and I wasn't on a job I would literally hunt him down like a stalker (Sorry Cheryl but, it is what it is, I had to get me some Bill time) The last couple years it's been so few and far between conversations when he was sick I would sit to talk with him and he would completely assure me he was fine and things would be good. Then he would always turn to ask about me and offer his encouragement and welcome advice. He always had a way of making me walk away feeling good. He had a beautiful soul and I will miss him with all of my heart. My heart is breaking may your family find some peace in your memories. With all my Love and Condolences Tina Salamino
